Westerner's should take note of unfair education trade off with China

Although there are many factors and correlation does not imply causation, one could argue that China has been taking advantage of the education system of Westernized countries without giving anything in return. This way, China doesn't have to invest as much in their universities (they can just send students to Western universities) and they can use the left over money to invest in technology development. Although this is certainly not the only factor involved in China's rapid economic growth, it is something Westerners should take note of if they wish to compete with China.
